	þ.		CUMBE	d Aer	9 1 7.,	Bull	PENTIAL			अस
1	```			3	-	-	in Jaw							- 50X1	HUM
	ì.	KIN I	mit i	n Neu	stadt	and	Army I	Jait in	n Boehn	ia.
TION					p	ACF	ORTAIN	F D						Ę	50X1	 -HUl
F CONTE	ENT									27 0	ctober	1957	· · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · ·	`
BTAINED							DATI	E PREP	ARED	21 0	C GODET	± / /4
ENCES_
3		E N	ICI OSI	IRES	(NO. &	(TYPE))
		C.l'	,	,	, =	,							· · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · ·
₹KS
													_
, , , , , , , , , , , , , , , , , , , ,			 			·····							 50)X1-H	ıUM−
										*
1.	Va	s lec	sted i	in a (eries	ement nilve	and ets	tion a	nd eas	ા છા ક	are ro-	.ar ouc	lline
1.	Je te Ka	e lec merz Ghra tewle mero	te (Q	in a (51/Y (6 51/Y)	76) r /Y 85 57) w	eilro). It hich to be	cad sta t was s was co ationed e in Os	tion a ubordi mmande	nd east nate to de by a this rakow (10 51 50 50 50 50 50 50 50 50 50 50 50 50 50	o a he color heado Q 51/2 /Y 74	endquar sel. quarter Z 24).	ters s was Other	labor		50X 1	50X:
1.	Je te Ke	s les werze Chrz tewie ontrol ettal:	inted in (Q : inches (Q : inches (Q : inches with the control of t	in a (51/Y) (0 51/Y) an ere k	76) r /Y 85 57) w agent nown batts	ailro ailro hich to be lion	pad state was see was continued ationed ationed ationed ationed ationed at a Followski and the static	tion a subordi mmande l at Kr swiecim	nd east nate to de by a this rakow (10 51 50 50 50 50 50 50 50 50 50 50 50 50 50	o a he color heads Q 51/7 74	endquar iel. quarter Z 24).) and S	ters s was Other	labor		50X1
	Je to Ka	officers of the state of the st	inted in (Q : interest	in a control of the c	egeneration (1) (1) (1) (2) (2) (2) (2) (2) (2) (2) (2) (2) (2	eilro i. It hich to be lion and to labo ho we ch of ngth	ationed at a t was s was constant of the	tion a subordi mmande lat Krawiecim oned at Lish ta rength and canies. In the had for battal	nd eas nate to d by a this rakow (in (Q 51); Cswie bank uni slight one hear pit. The 5th pit. The square wear wear	o a he color head of 51/1 74. Y 74. The im that is the connection of the company of the connection of	eadquar iel. quarter 2 24). and S on the Fr: ceeded ters. provid pranies Due to aporari erecru	ters other o	labor viec was F 51/H O men of the gus50X organ assign ised in	se 1-HU ized ment	50X 1	50x: 1-HU
	See	ehedu ettali ett	iled to a that ien genize ies we nand ir uits, reasion airists.	y an ere k The be a he ev d interes me worker the Nover to to seign fter since	egence (A) r (Y 85) (A) S (S)	which to be lion and the and ditte transfer to the and ditte transfer to the and the a	ationed at a t was s was continued in Os static on a Foir tal stronger comported in the April of the April trail trails t	tion a subordi mmande lat Krawiecim oned at Lish ta and canies. In the had for ever aining formall aining of Pol	nd east nate to dear this akow (in (Q 51); Cswie bank uni slight one hear the 5th our square company years course sldiers and ha	o a he color head of the color talic tof the color talic talic tof the color talic	ceeded ters. Due to apparaise recruit the dinner of the di	other of the ly ration the schar of the ly ration the ly ration to the ly ration the less of the ly ration that ly rati	o labor viec was F 51/H O men of the gus50X organiassignised in the ge of ough 19 to batta	se 1-HU ized ment n re the	50X1	50x1 1-HU
	So But Co	cheductation of received in all	iled to to a that ion ganize ies we mand ir y reas ion at the to to the total	in a control in a	whose street of the foundation of the street	which steets be lion and to be laborated the control of the contro	ationed at a t was s was continued at in Os static on a Polin tall stronger comported in the April of the Apr	tion a subordi mmande lat Krawiecim oned at lish ta lish laining of everaining laining of Polymere es lish laki Polymere es lish	mate to this akow (in (Q 51); Coswie bank uni slight one hear to the 5th our square company existing the course stimate of the 5th A course stimate of the 5th A course stimate	o a he color heade of 51/2 74. Y 74. The im to find the community of the community of the community of the color of the co	ceeded ters. The recruit the diagram is the diagram	ters other oth	o labor viec was F 51/H O men of the gus50X organ assign ised interement of the percent of at words at	se 1-HU ized ment n re the	50 X 1	50x: 1-HU 1-HU
	See	checker of the company of the compan	iled to to a that ion ganize we ies we and our plant is who is the formal in the forma	y an dinter me worked into the seignment of the seignment	whose street of the solding th	which step to be aliced to be a set to be	ationed at a was so was continued at in Os static on a Polynonia on a Polynonia on a Polynonia of the April of the April of the April of the April of 19 parts diers wore kind the sau rrison pe served in a pe served i	tion a subordi mmande lat Krawiecim oned at lish to anies. In the had formall aining of Polygere es maki Polygere es winter winter winter late of the color of th	mate to a this akow (in (Q 51); Coswie bank uni slight one hear the 5th our square company existicates and has a timate	o a he color heade of the community of the community of the community of the color	ceeded ters. Trom who companies the dimension during while cap base covered	ters s was Other Cosnor lieg (1 1,000 Four ed a were the ly ra wich t es of schar ty and soldie nds. coats	o labor viec was F 51/H O men of the gus50X organ assign ised interest we be batta percent at we ers on Every. The interest of the second seco	se 1-HU ized ment n re the 033	50 X 1	50x: 1-HU 1-HU

50X1-HUM

Officers of the battalion included Captain Ma/ks, (phonetic spelling) (fnu) battalion commander Lieutenant Kornosz " " deputy commander supply officer candidate) Piasecki (phonetic spelling) (fnu) commander supply officer staff Sergeant (officer candidate) Piasecki (phonetic spelling) (fnu) commander of the joint one of the political officer and record practices, and about 200 old, discarded rifles which were used for guard service and record practices, and about 200 old, discarded rifles which were used for frill and marksmanship training. Some model—Mig41 PFScH submachine guns were used for instruction purposes. Prior to the spring of 1954, no other wespons were available for instruction and training, nor were any weapons or ammunitions served in the billeting area in case of alarm or mobilization. The battalion had two trucks which were used for supply. Training during the four weeks' basic training course included formal drill and marching exercises, marksmanship training with rifles and the simplified the simplified practices of combat training. There were no night exercises and no instruction in map-reading or use of the compass. Elank cartridres were never used. Political indeotrination was essentially intensified and included political instruction, discussions and the study of newspapers. After the recruits' reassignment to the labor companies, the soldiers whe worked eight hours daily received an additional two hours' military training which was given in the form of political instruction twice a week. Every soldier received a payment of 8 s/oty per menth. Soldiers working in the pit also received wages which averaged 1,000 to 1,200 z/oty a month for underground workers and were to be paid by the pit management. About 40 percent of these wages were paid out and the balance was retained by the battalien. The kind of active service was generally recarded as heing done under duress. Comradeship among the soldiers was yeary good, so that superiers were frequently unable to enforce their will against this	CONTROL
Officers of the battalion included Captain Marke, (phonetic spelling) (fnu) deputy commander deputy commander and captain Marken (officer candidate) Piasecki (phonetic spelling) (fnu) one of the political officer supply officer supply officer supply officer supply officer supply officer candidate) Earwankowsky (phonetic spelling) (fnu) one of the political officer candidate) Earwankowsky (phonetic spelling) (fnu) commander of the 3d Co. The battalion had 40 good rifles which were used for guard service and record practices, and about 200 old, discarded rifles which were used for drill and marksmanship training. Some model M1941 FFBCH submaching guns were used for instruction purposes. Prior to the spring of 1954, no other weapons were available for instruction and training, nor were any weapons or ammunitions extered in the billeting area in case of alarm or mobilization. The battalion had two trucks which were used for supply. Training during the four weeks basic training course included formal drill and marching exercises, marksmanning training with rifles and the simply exercises of combat training. There were no night exercises and no instruction in map-reading or use of the compass. Elank cartridges were haver used sessentially intensified and included political infortantion was essentially intensified and included political instruction, discussions and the study of newspapers. After the recruits' reassignment to the labor companies, the soldiers who worked eight hours delly received an additional two hours' military training which was given in the form of political instruction twice a week. Every soldier received a payment of 8 s/oty per month. Soldiers working in the pit also received wages which averaged 1,000 to 1,200 z/oty a month for underground workers and were to be paid by the pit management. About 40 percent of these wages were paid out and the balance was retained by the battalien. The norale of the troops was retained by the battalien. The norale of the troops was bad, all the more so as t	CONFIDENTIAL
Officers of the battalion included Captain Marke, (phonetic spelling) (fnu) deputy commander deputy commander and captain Marken (officer candidate) Piasecki (phonetic spelling) (fnu) one of the political officer supply officer supply officer supply officer supply officer supply officer candidate) Earwankowsky (phonetic spelling) (fnu) one of the political officer candidate) Earwankowsky (phonetic spelling) (fnu) commander of the 3d Co. The battalion had 40 good rifles which were used for guard service and record practices, and about 200 old, discarded rifles which were used for drill and marksmanship training. Some model M1941 FFBCH submaching guns were used for instruction purposes. Prior to the spring of 1954, no other weapons were available for instruction and training, nor were any weapons or ammunitions extered in the billeting area in case of alarm or mobilization. The battalion had two trucks which were used for supply. Training during the four weeks basic training course included formal drill and marching exercises, marksmanning training with rifles and the simply exercises of combat training. There were no night exercises and no instruction in map-reading or use of the compass. Elank cartridges were haver used sessentially intensified and included political infortantion was essentially intensified and included political instruction, discussions and the study of newspapers. After the recruits' reassignment to the labor companies, the soldiers who worked eight hours delly received an additional two hours' military training which was given in the form of political instruction twice a week. Every soldier received a payment of 8 s/oty per month. Soldiers working in the pit also received wages which averaged 1,000 to 1,200 z/oty a month for underground workers and were to be paid by the pit management. About 40 percent of these wages were paid out and the balance was retained by the battalien. The norale of the troops was retained by the battalien. The norale of the troops was bad, all the more so as t
Captain Marks, (phonetic spelling) (fnu) Lieutenant Kornosz " " " " " " " " " " " " " " " " " " "	- 2 -	· ·
Captain Marks, (phonetic spelling) (fnu) Lieutenant Kornosz " " " " " " " " " " " " " " " " " " "		, Captain Marks, (phonetic spelling) (fnu) Lieutenant Kornosz " " " " " " " " " " " " " " " " " " "	Officers of the hettelion included
captain Merakowskig: " " supply officer Captain Merakowskig: " " supply officer Staff Sergeant (officer candidate) Piasecki (phonetic spelling) (fnu) commander of the political officer Staff Sergeant (officer candidate) Earwankowskig: (phonetic spelling) (fnu) commander of the 3d Co. The battalion had 40 good rifles which were used for guard service and record practices, and about 200 old, discarded rifles which were used for drill and marksmanship training. Some model-M1941 FFSEGI submachine guns were used for instruction purposes. Prior to the spring of 1954, no other weapons were available for instruction and training, nor were any weapons or ammunitions setzed in the billeting area in case of alarm or mobilization. The battalion had two trucks which were used for supply. Training during the four weeks' basic training course included formal drill and marching exercises, marksmanship training with rifles and the simplified the simplified training. There were no night exercises and no instruction in map-reading or use of the compass. Blank cartridges were never used. Folitical indectrination was essentially intensified and included political instruction, discussions and the study of newspapers. After the recruits' reassignment to the labor companies, the soldiers who worked eight hours daily received an additional two hours' military training which was given in the form of political instruction twice a week. Every soldier received a payment of 8 s/oty per menth. Soldiers working in the pit also received wages which averaged 1,000 to 1,200 z/oty a month for underground workers and were to be paid by the pit management. About 40 percent of these wages were paid out and the balance was retained by the battalien. The morale of the troops was bad, all the more so as the members of the labor battalions were considered second-rate soldiers. This kind of active service was generally researed as being done under duress. Comradeship among the soldiers was very good, so that superiers were for breaches of discipline
Staff Sergeant (officer candidate) Piasecki (phonetic spelling) (fnu) Staff Sergeant (officer candidate) Earwankowsky (phonetic spelling) (fnu) The battalion had 40 good rifles which were used for guard service and record practices, and about 200 old, discarded rifles which were used for drill and marksmanship training. Some model-M1941 FFSEGI submachine guns were used for instruction purposes. Prior to the spring of 1954, no other weapons were available for instruction and training, nor were any weapons or ammunitions severed in the billeting area in case of alarm or mobilization. The bettalion had two trucks which were used for supply. Training during the four weeks' basic training course included formal drill and marching exercises, marksmanship training with rifles and the simple at basic practices of combat training. There were no night exercises and no instruction in map-reading or use of the compass. Blank cartridges were hever used. Political indectrination was essentially intensified and included political instruction, discussions and the study of newspapers. After the recruits' reassignment to the labor companies, the soldiers who worked eight hours daily received an additional two hours' military training which was given in the form of political instruction twice a week. Every soldier received a payment of 8 s/oty per menth. Soldiers working in the pit also received wages which averaged 1,000 to 1,200 z/oty a month for underground workers and were to be paid by the pit management. About 40 percent of these wages were paid out and the balance was retained by the battalien. The morale of the trops was bad, all the more so as the members of the labor battalions were considered second-rate soldiers. This kind of active service was generally regarded as being done under duress. Commandenty among the was very good, so that superiers were 50X1- desertion A small KBW (Internal Security) unit whose soldiers were blue service color was also stationed at Jaworzno. This unit which had about company size	Lieutenant Kornosz " " "	The state of the s
Staff Sergeant (officer candidate) Harwankowske (phonetic spelling) (fnu) The battalion had 40 good rifles which were used for guard service and record practices, and about 200 old, discarded rifles which were used for drill and marksmanship training. Some model-M1941 FFSBCH submachine guns were used for instruction purposes. Prior to the submachine guns were used for instruction purposes. Prior to the submachine guns were any weapons or ammunitions seemed in the billeting area in case of alarm or mobilization. The battalion had two trucks which were used for supply. Training during the four weeks basic training course included formal drill and marching exercises, marksmanship training with rifles and the simplest basic practices of combat training. There were no night exercises and no instruction in map-reading or use of the compass. Blank cartridges were never used. Folitical indectrination was essentially intensified and included political instruction, discussions and the study of newspapers. After the recruits' reassignment to the labor companies, the soldiers who worked eight hours daily received an additional two hours' military training which was given in the form of political instruction twice a week. Every soldier received a payment of 8 sloty per meanth. Soldiers working in the pit also received wages which averaged 1,000 to 1,200 zloty a month for underground workers and were to be paid by the pit management. About 40 percent of these wages were paid out and the balance was retained by the battalien. The morals of the troops was bad, all the more so as the members of the labor battalions were considered second-rate soldiers. This kind of active service was generally researched and she management, should be a subject of the troops was bad, all the more so as the members of the labor battalions were frequently unable to enforce their will against this concord. Punishments for breaches of discipline were frequently inflieted A small KBW (Internal Security) unit whose soldiers were blue service colo		supply officer
Harwankowsky (phonetic spelling) (fnu) The battalion had 40 good rifles which were used for guard service and record practices, and about 200 old, discarded rifles which were used for drill and marksmanship training. Some model-M1941 FFSCGI submachine guns were used for instruction purposes. Prior to the submachine guns were used for instruction purposes. Prior to the spring of 1954, no other weapons were available for instruction and training, nor were any weapons or ammunitions seered in the billeting area in case of alarm or mobilization. The battalion had two trucks which were used for supply. Training during the four weeks' basic training course included formal drill and marching exercises, marksmanship training with rifles and the simplist basic practices of combat training. There were no night exercises and no instruction in map-reading or use of the compass. Blank cartridges were never used. Soxi-lessentially intensified and included political indectrination was essentially intensified and included political instruction, discussions and the study of newspapers. After the recruits' reassignment to the labor companies, the soldiers who worked eight hours daily received an additional two hours' military training which was given in the form of political instruction twice a week. Every soldier received a payment of 8 sloty per month. Soldiers working in the pit also received wages which averaged 1,000 to 1,200 zloty a month for underground workers and were to be paid by the pit management. About 40 percent of these wages were paid out and the balance was retained by the battalien. The morale of the troeps was bad, all the more so as the members of the labor battalions were considered second-rate soldiers. This kind of active service was generally regarded as being done under duress. Comradeship among the soldiers was also stationed at Jaworano. This unit which had about company size was believed to be connected with the large prison located there. A small KBW (Internal Security) unit whose soldiers were	(phonetic spelling) (fnu)	one of the political officer
The battalion had 40 good rifles which were used for guard service and record practices, and about 200 old, discarded rifles which were used for drill and marksmanship training. Some model_M1941 FFSCH_submachine guns were used for instruction purposes. Prior to the spring of 1954, no other weapons were available for instruction and training, nor were any weapons or ammunitions seemed in the billeting area in case of alarm or mobilization. The battalion had two trucks which were used for supply. Training during the four weeks' basic training course included formal drill and marching exercises, marksmanship training with rifles and the simplish basic practices of combat training. There were no night exercises and no instruction in map-reading or use of the compass. Blank cartridges were never used. Political indectrination was essentially intensified and included political instruction, discussions and the study of newspapers. After the recruits' reassignment to the labor companies, the soldiers who worked eight hours daily received an additional two hours' military training which was given in the form of political instruction twice a week. Every soldier received a payment of 8 sloty per menth. Soldiers working in the pit also received wages which averaged 1,000 to 1,200 zloty a month for underground workers and were to be paid by the pit management. About 40 percent of these wages were paid out and the balance was retained by the battalien. The morale of the troeps was bad, all the more as the members of the labor battalions were considered second-rate soldiers. This kind of active service was generally rewarded as being done under duress. Comradeship among the soldiers was represented the soldiers was else stationed at Jaworzno. This unit which had about company size was believed to be connected with the large prison located there. 1 A small KBW (Internal Security) unit whose soldiers were blue service color was also stationed at Jaworzno. This unit which had about company size was believed to be connected wi	Staff Sergeant (officer candidate)
and record practices, and about 200 old, discarded rifles which were used for drill and marksmanship training. Some model-M1941 FFSSCH submachine guns were used for instruction purposes. Prior to the spring of 1954, no other weapons or ammunitions stored in the billeting area in case of alarm or mobilization. The battalion had two trucks which were used for supply. Training during the four weeks' basic training course included formal drill and marching exercises, marksmanship training with rifles and the simplified basic practices of combat training. There were no night exercises and no instruction in map-reading or use of the compass. Blank cartridges were never used. Political indectrination was essentially intensified and included political instruction, discussions and the study of newspapers. After the recruits' reassignment to the labor companies, the soldiers who worked eight hours daily received an additional two hours' military training which was given in the form of political instruction twice a week. Every soldier received a payment of 8 sloty per menth. Soldiers working in the pit also received wages which averaged 1,000 to 1,200 z/oty a month for underground workers and were to be paid by the pit management. About 40 percent of these wages were paid out and the balance was retained by the battalien. The morale of the troops was bad, all the more so as the members of the labor battalions were considered second-rate soldiers. This kind of active service was generally rewarded as being done under duress. Comradeship among the soldiers was very good, so that superiors were 50X1-fore their will against this concord. Punishments for breaches of discipline were frequently inflieted A small KEW (Internal Security) unit whose soldiers were blue service color was also stationed at Jaworano. This unit which had about company size was believed to be connected with the large prison located there. Prior to September 1955, the barracks installation on the west side of the Linden (P 51/H 95) quartered about one	(phonetic spelling) (inu)	commander of the 3d Co.
and record practices, and about 200 old, discarded rifles which were used for drill and marksmanship training. Some model-M1941 FFSSCH submachine guns were used for instruction purposes. Prior to the spring of 1954, no other weapons or ammunitions stored in the billeting area in case of alarm or mobilization. The battalion had two trucks which were used for supply. Training during the four weeks' basic training course included formal drill and marching exercises, marksmanship training with rifles and the simplifiest basic practices of combat training. There were no night exercises and no instruction in map-reading or use of the compass. Blank cartridges were never used. Political indectrination was essentially intensified and included political instruction, discussions and the study of newspapers. After the recruits' reassignment to the labor companies, the soldiers who worked eight hours daily received an additional two hours' military training which was given in the form of political instruction twice a week. Every soldier received a payment of 8 sloty per menth. Soldiers werking in the pit also received wages which averaged 1,000 to 1,200 zloty a month for underground workers and were to be paid by the pit management. About 40 percent of these wages were paid out and the balance was retained by the battalien. The morale of the troops was bad, all the more so as the members of the labor battalions were considered second-rate soldiers. This kind of active service was generally regarded as being done under duress. Comradeship among the soldiers was very good, so that superiors were 50X1-frequently unable to enforce their will against this concord. Punishments for breaches of discipline were frequently inflieted A small KBW (Internal Security) unit whose soldiers were blue service color was also stationed at Javorano. This unit which had about company size was believed to be connected with the large prison located there. Prior to September 1955, the barracks installation on the west side of the Linden (P 51/	The battalion had 40 good rifles which were u	sed for migrd service submachine guns were used for instruction purposes. Prior to the spring of 1954, no other weapons were available for instruction and training, nor were any weapons or ammunitions stered in the billeting area in case of alarm or mobilization. The battalion had two trucks which were used for supply. Training during the four weeks' basic training course included formal drill and marching exercises, marksmanship training with rifles and the simple to be sice practices of combat training. There were no night exercises and no instruction in map-reading or use of the compass. Blank cartridges were never used. Political indectrination was essentially intensified and included political instruction, discussions and the study of newspapers. After the recruits' reassignment to the labor companies, the soldiers who worked eight hours daily received an additional two hours' military training which was given in the form of political instruction twice a week. Every soldier received a payment of 8 sloty per month. Soldiers working in the pit also received wages which averaged 1,000 to 1,200 zloty a month for underground workers and were to be paid by the pit management. About 40 percent of these wages were paid out and the balance was retained by the battalien. The morale of the troops was bad, all the more so as the members of the labor battalions were considered second-rate soldiers. This kind of active service was generally regarded as being done under duress. Comradeship among the soldiers was very good, so that superiors were 50X1-frequently unable to enforce their will against this concord. Punishments for breaches of discipline were frequently inflieted 50X1-frequently unable to enforce their will against this concord. Punishments for breaches of discipline were frequently inflieted 50X1-frequently one case of 50X1-frequently unable to enforce their will against this concord. Punishments for breaches of discipline were frequently inflieted 50X1-frequently part of the first part of the first part of the firs	and record practices, and about 200 old. disc.	arded rifles which were spring of 1954, no other weapons were available for instruction and training, nor were any weapons or ammunitions stered in the billeting area in case of alarm or mobilization. The battalion had two trucks which were used for supply. Training during the four weeks' basic training course included formal drill and marching exercises, marksmanship training with rifles and the simplifiat basic practices of combat training. There were no night exercises and no instruction in map-reading or use of the compass. Blank cartridges were never used. Political indoctrination was essentially intensified and included political instruction, discussions and the study of newspapers. After the recruits' reassignment to the labor companies, the soldiers who worked eight hours daily received an additional two hours' military training which was given in the form of political instruction twice a week. Every soldier received a payment of 8 sloty per menth. Soldiers werking in the pit also received wages which averaged 1,000 to 1,200 zloty a month for underground workers and were to be paid by the pit management. About 40 percent of these wages were paid out and the balance was retained by the battalien. The morale of the troops was bad, all the more so as the members of the labor battalions were considered second-rate soldiers. This kind of active service was generally resarded as being done under duress. Comradeship among the soldiers was very good, so that superiers were frequently unable to enforce their will against this concord. Punishments for breaches of discipline were frequently inflieted Only one case of 50X1-fox1-fox2-fox2-fox2-fox2-fox2-fox2-fox2-fox2	used for drill and marksmanship training. Some	e model-M1941 PPSECH training, nor were any weapons or ammunitions seved in the billeting area in case of alarm or mobilization. The battalion had two trucks which were used for supply. Training during the four weeks' basic training course included formal drill and marching exercises, marksmanship training with rifles and the simplet basic practices of combat training. There were no night exercises and no instruction in map-reading or use of the compass. Blank cartridges were never used. Political indectrination was essentially intensified and included political instruction, discussions and the study of newspapers. After the recruits' reassignment to the labor companies, the soldiers who worked eight hours daily received an additional two hours' military training which was given in the form of political instruction twice a week. Every soldier received a payment of 8 sloty per menth. Soldiers working in the pit also received wages which averaged 1,000 to 1,200 zloty a month for underground workers and were to be paid by the pit management. About 40 percent of these wages were paid out and the balance was retained by the battalien. The morals of the troops was bad, all the more so as the members of the labor battalions were considered second-rate soldiers. This kind of active service was generally regarded as being done under duress. Comradeship among the soldiers was very good, so that superiers were frequently unable to enforce their will against this concord. Punishments for breaches of discipline were frequently inflicted 50X1-60X1-60X1-60X1-60X1-60X1-60X1-60X1-6	spring of 1954, no other weapons were available	le for instruction and which were used for supply. Training during the four weeks basic training course included formal drill and marching exercises, marksmanship training with rifles and the simplified basic practices of combat training. There were no night exercises and no instruction in map-reading or use of the compass. Blank cartridges were never used. Political indectrination was essentially intensified and included political instruction, discussions and the study of newspapers. After the recruits' reassignment to the labor companies, the soldiers who worked eight hours daily received an additional two hours' military training which was given in the form of political instruction twice a week. Every soldier received a payment of 8 sloty per menth. Soldiers werking in the pit also received wages which averaged 1,000 to 1,200 zloty a month for underground workers and were to be paid by the pit management. About 40 percent of these wages were paid out and the balance was retained by the battalien. The morale of the troeps was bad, all the more so as the members of the labor battalions were considered second-rate soldiers. This kind of active service was generally recarded as being done under dures. Comradeship among the soldiers was very good, so that superiors were frequently unable to enforce their will against this concord. Punishments for breaches of discipline were frequently inflieted A small KBW (Internal Security) unit whose soldiers were blue service color was also stationed at Jaworzno. This unit which had about company size was believed to be connected with the large prison located there. 1 Prior to September 1953, the barracks installation on the west side of the Lindem (P 51/H 93) road on the southwestern perimeter of Neustadt (P 51/H 93) quartered about one KBW (Internal Security) battalion.	training, nor were any weapons or ammunitions	stared in the hilleting training course included formal drill and marching exercises, marksmanship training with rifles and the simplest basic practices of combat training. There were no night exercises and no instruction in map-reading or use of the compass. Blank cartridges were never used. Political indectrination was	which were used for supply. Training during the	he four weeks basic map-reading or use of the compass. Blank cartridges were never used. 50X1-lemap-reading or use of the compass. Blank cartridges were never used. 50X1-lemap-reading or use of the compass. Blank cartridges were never used. 50X1-lemap-reading or use of the compass. Blank cartridges were never used. 50X1-lemap-reading or use of the compass. Blank cartridges were never used. For the study of newspapers. After the recruits' reassignment to the labor companies, the soldiers who worked eight hours daily received an additional two hours' military training which was given in the form of political instruction twice a week. Every soldier received a payment of 8 s/oty per menth. Soldiers werking in the pit also received wages which averaged 1,000 to 1,200 z/oty a month for underground workers and were to be paid by the pit management. About 40 percent of these wages were paid out and the balance was retained by the battalien. The morale of the troops was bad, all the more so as the members of the labor battalions were considered second-rate soldiers. This kind of active service was generally regarded as being done under duress. Compadeship among the soldiers was very good, so that superiors were frequently unable to enforce their will against this concord. Punishments for breaches of discipline were frequently inflieted 50X1-lemap frequently unable to enforce their will against this concord. Punishments for breaches of discipline were frequently inflieted 50X1-lemap frequently unable to be connected with the large prison located there. 1 Prior to September 1953, the barracks installation on the west side of the Linden (P 51/H 93) road on the southwestern perimeter of Neustadt (P 51/H 93) quartered about one KBW (Internal Security) battalion.	training course included formal drill and mare	chims exercises.
Political indestrination was essentially intensified and included political instruction, discussions and the study of newspapers. After the recruits' reassignment to the labor companies, the soldiers who worked eight hours daily received an additional two hours' military training which was given in the form of political instruction twice a week. Every soldier received a payment of 8 s/oty per menth. Soldiers werking in the pit also received wages which averaged 1,000 to 1,200 z/oty a month for underground workers and were to be paid by the pit management. About 40 percent of these wages were paid out and the balance was retained by the battalien. The morale of the troops was bad, all the more so as the members of the labor battalions were considered second-rate soldiers. This kind of active service was generally regarded as being done under duress. Comradeship among the soldiers was very good, so that superiers were frequently unable to enforce their will against this concord. Punishments for breaches of discipline were frequently inflieted 50X1-desertion A small KEW (Internal Security) unit whose soldiers were blue service color was also stationed at Jaworzno. This unit which had about company size was believed to be connected with the large prison located there. 1 Prior to September 1953, the barracks installation on the west side of the Linden (P 51/H 93) road on the southwestern perimeter of Neustadt (P 51/H 93) quartered about one KEW (Internal Security) battalion.	combat training. There were no night everyies	prost basic practices of Political indectrination was essentially intensified and included political instruction, discussions and the study of newspapers. After the recruits' reassignment to the labor companies, the soldiers who worked eight hours daily received an additional two hours' military training which was given in the form of political instruction twice a week. Every soldier received a payment of 8 sloty per menth. Soldiers werking in the pit also received wages which averaged 1,000 to 1,200 z/oty a month for underground workers and were to be paid by the pit management. About 40 percent of these wages were paid out and the balance was retained by the battalien. The morals of the troeps was bad, all the more so as the members of the labor hattalions were considered second-rate soldiers. This kind of active service was generally regarded as being done under duress. Comradeship among the soldiers was very good, so that superiors were frequently unable to enforce their will against this concord. Punishments for breaches of discipline were frequently inflisted 4 small KBW (Internal Security) unit whose soldiers wore blue service color was also stationed at Jaworzno. This unit which had about company size was believed to be connected with the large prison located there. 1 Prior to September 1953, the barracks installation on the west side of the Lindem (P 51/H 93) road on the southwestern perimeter of Neustadt (P 51/H 93) quartered about one KBW (Internal Security) battalion.	map-reading or use of the compass. Blank cart:	ridges were never used.
essentially intensified and included political instruction, discussions and the study of newspapers. After the recruits' reassignment to the labor companies, the soldiers who worked eight hours daily received an additional two hours' military training which was given in the form of political instruction twice a week. Every soldier received a payment of 8 sloty per menth. Soldiers werking in the pit also received wages which averaged 1,000 to 1,200 z/oty a month for underground workers and were to be paid by the pit management. About 40 percent of these wages were paid out and the balance was retained by the battalien. The morals of the troeps was bad, all the more so as the members of the labor battalions were considered second-rate soldiers. This kind of active service was generally regarded as being done under duress. Comradeship among the soldiers was very good, so that superiers were frequently unable to enforce their will against this concord. Punishments for breaches of discipline were frequently inflieted A small KBW (Internal Security) unit whose soldiers were blue service color was also stationed at Jaworzno. This unit which had about company size was believed to be connected with the large prison located there. 1 Prior to September 1953, the barracks installation on the west side of the Linden (P 51/H 93) road on the southwestern perimeter of Neustadt (P 51/H 93) quartered about one KBW (Internal Security) battalion.		50X1-H working in the pit also received wages which averaged 1,000 to 1,200 zicty a month for underground workers and were to be paid by the pit management. About 40 percent of these wages were paid out and the balance was retained by the battalien. The morale of the troeps was bad, all the more so as the members of the labor battalions were considered second-rate soldiers. This kind of active service was generally regarded as being done under duress. Comradeship among the soldiers was very good, so that superiers were frequently unable to enforce their will against this concord. Punishments for breaches of discipline were frequently inflicted 50X1- desertion 50X1- A small KBW (Internal Security) unit whose soldiers were blue service color was also stationed at Jaworzno. This unit which had about company size was believed to be connected with the large prison located there. 1 Prior to September 1953, the barracks installation on the west side of the Linden (P 51/H 93) road on the southwesterm perimeter of Neustadt (P 51/H 93) quartered about one KBW (Internal Security) battalion.	and the study of newspapers. After the recruit labor companies, the soldiers who worked eight additional two hours' military training which	ts' reassignment to the t hours daily received an
was very good, so that superiors were frequently unable to enforce their will against this concord. Punishments for breaches of discipline were frequently inflisted only one case of 50X1- desertion 50X1- A small KBW (Internal Security) unit whose soldiers were blue service color was also stationed at Jaworzno. This unit which had about company size was believed to be connected with the large prison located there. 1 Prior to September 1953, the barracks installation on the west side of the Linden (P 51/H 93) road on the southwestern perimeter of Neustadt (P 51/H 93) quartered about one KBW (Internal Security) battalion.	werking in the pit also received wages which a zloty a month for underground workers and were management. About 40 percent of these wages we balance was retained by the battalien. The monbad, all the more so as the members of the law considered second-rate soldiers. This kind of	everaged 1,000 to 1,200 to be paid by the pit ere paid out and the rale of the troops was bor battalions were active service was for breaches of discipline were frequently inflieted 50X1- desertion 50X1- A small KBW (Internal Security) unit whose soldiers were blue service color was also stationed at Jaworzno. This unit which had about company size was believed to be connected with the large prison located there. 1 Prior to September 1953, the barracks installation on the west side of the Linden (P 51/H 93) road on the southwestern perimeter of Neustadt (P 51/H 93) quartered about one KBW (Internal Security) battalion. 50X1-HU	soldiers was very good, so the	nat superiors were 50X1-F
A small KBW (Internal Security) unit whose soldiers wore blue service color was also stationed at Jaworzno. This unit which had about company size was believed to be connected with the large prison located there. 1 Prior to September 1953, the barracks installation on the west side of the Linden (P 51/H 93) road on the southwestern perimeter of Neustadt (P 51/H 93) quartered about one KBW (Internal Security) battalion. 50X1-HU	for breaches of discipline were frequently inf	st this concord. Punishments Plisted 50X1-H
A small KBW (Internal Security) unit whose soldiers wore blue service color was also stationed at Jaworzno. This unit which had about company size was believed to be connected with the large prison located there. 1 Prior to September 1953, the barracks installation on the west side of the Linden (P 51/H 93) road on the southwestern perimeter of Neustadt (P 51/H 93) quartered about one KBW (Internal Security) battalion. 50X1-HU	4000000
color was also stationed at Jaworzno. This unit which had about company size was believed to be connected with the large prison located there. 1 Prior to September 1953, the barracks installation on the west side of the Linden (P 51/H 93) road on the southwestern perimeter of Neustadt (P 51/H 93) quartered about one KBW (Internal Security) battalion. 50X1-HU	deset.elou	50X1-H
50X1-HU	color was also stationed at Jaworzno. This uni size was believed to be connected with the lar Prior to September 1953, the barracks installs of the Linden (P 51/H 93) road on the southwes	it which had about company ge prison located there. 1 ation on the west side
	•	• •
CONFIDENTIAL		50X1-HUI
A Ass 4 4 4 10 11 11 11 11 11 11 11 11 11 11 11 11	CONFIDENTIAL
	TANK TANK TAN

Sanitized Copy Approved for Release 2010/10/27 : CIA-RDP80-00810A005400820011-3